- Customers are requested to practice physical distancing when interacting with JFM sales or delivery personnel when at your farm.
- On-farm sales and service calls continue while utilizing Covid-19 preventative measures including mask wearing. JFM personnel will use physical distancing practices and will avoid confined spaces when at your farm.

Plan for Success: Check Feed Inventories Now!

Now that harvest is about finished for the year, this is a good time to take inventory of your feeds to plan for success over the next several months. In addition to making sure you have enough feed for the coming year, it is also important to make sure feed is being used quickly enough to keep feed fresh, and to make sure there is space for next year's crop.

Checking inventories at this time allows you and your JFM sales rep to make small ration adjustments now instead of possible big adjustments later. Every time a feed change is made animals need time to adjust – they are creatures of habit that do not like change! For example, if the JFM Nutrition Team knows how much haylage and corn silage is available for the remainder of the year, the ration can be balanced with proportions that maintain inventories until harvest. Frequently changing forage proportions requires cattle to have to frequently adapt to feed changes, which can negatively impact growth or performance. Managing feed inventories are one step in ensuring consistent production throughout the year.

The JFM Sales Team is happy to help you calculate your available feed inventory to help you maintain your feed supply until next harvest season.
